The Armitage Education Center at the KU Field Station serves as an outstanding venue for courses, workshops, lectures, planning retreats and special events. Situated just eight miles north of the University of Kansas main campus in Lawrence, it offers ready access to a peaceful, private, natural setting that promotes productive meetings. The building, which also houses scientific teaching laboratories, is part of the Field Station’s Research and Operations Center. Amenities include:

- A 550-square-foot classroom/lecture hall with movable tables and chairs (accommodates 35–50), Internet access, projector and full screen;
- an adjacent gathering room with gas fireplace;
- a sunny conference room that seats up to 12;
- a full kitchen;
- restrooms;
- a pergola-covered patio, just outside the kitchen, with an adjacent restored prairie area;
- nearby nature trails with parking, interpretive signage, restrooms and drinking fountains.

The Armitage Center may be reserved for half days or full days. Charges may be waived for short term use of the Center in support of classes, field trips and events.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>University of Kansas groups</th>
<th>Other educational groups</th>
<th>External noneducational groups</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>$100/day</td>
<td>$130/day</td>
<td>$152/day</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(plus $30 for kitchen)</td>
<td>(plus $40 for kitchen)</td>
<td>(plus $50 for kitchen)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The KU Field Station and the Armitage Education Center are managed by the Kansas Biological Survey. Groups wishing to reserve the Armitage Center for meetings may contact Scott Campbell, the Survey’s Associate Director for Outreach and Public Service, 785-864-1502 or swcamp@ku.edu.

www.biosurvey.ku.edu www.facebook.com/ksbiosurvey.kufieldstation