

Armitage Education Center

The Armitage Education Center at the KU Field Station serves as an outstanding venue for courses, workshops, lectures, planning retreats and special events. Situated just eight miles north of the University of Kansas main campus in Lawrence, it offers ready access to a peaceful, private, natural setting conducive to productive meetings. The building, which also houses scientific teaching laboratories, is part of the Field Station's Research and Operations Center. Amenities include:

- a 550-square-foot classroom/lecture hall with movable tables and chairs (accommodates 35–50), high-speed Internet access, projector and full screen;
- an adjacent gathering room with gas fireplace;
- a sunny conference room that seats up to 12;
- a full kitchen;
- restrooms;
- a pergola-covered patio, just outside the kitchen, with an adjacent restored prairie area;
- nearby nature trails with parking, interpretive signage, restrooms and drinking fountains.

Armitage Center exterior and hearth room (classroom and kitchen adjacent to hearth room).

The Armitage Center may be reserved for half days or full days. Charges may be waived for short term use of the Center in support of classes, field trips and events.

University of Kansas groups
$100/day
(plus $30 for kitchen)

Other educational groups
$130/day
(plus $40 for kitchen)

External noneducational groups
$152/day
(plus $50 for kitchen)

The KU Field Station and the Armitage Education Center are managed by the Kansas Biological Survey. Groups wishing to reserve the Armitage Center for meetings may contact Kirsten Bosnak, the Survey's Communications Director, 785-864-6267 or kbosnak@ku.edu.

www.biosurvey.ku.edu

www.facebook.com/ksbiosurvey.kufieldstation